OTHER ISUES THEY ARE SOLVING

1

Drought has led to incursion of salt water into fresh water table: working to create "water banks" with farmers, local governments

2

Over 11 years, they worked with the state government and private manufacturers to find a substitute for copper in brake pads on autos and trucks (the copper caused salmon mutation and was killing the fish). They found the substitute and now it is California state law.

3

They worked with the California Coastal Commission (government) to consolidate the permitting process for land restoration.

PUTTING THESE IDEAS TO WORK FOR YOU...

How will you expand your potential for community impact through crosssector collaboration with new partners?

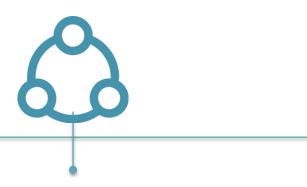

What are the "right questions" to ask?

Work with one or more participants to review and answer the questions on this worksheet and then be prepared to share your answers with the class. Thank you!

INNOVATION SUMMARY: WHY COLLABORATION IS CRITICAL

Social, environmental and other community-based change is faster and more effective when business, NGO/nonprofits and government work together to achieve a larger vision than any could achieve alone.

When resources are gathered and distributed based on a collaborative plan, the impact is greater and the work more effective.

As NGO/nonprofits, we can be leaders in effective change, inspiring others with our ethics, values and commitment.

WHAT ARE YOUR QUESTIONS?
